Finding Support

If you are having feelings of sadness or feeling unlike yourself, seek support from your loved ones or a mental health specialist.

If you are concerned about a loved one, start by talking to them and encourage them to talk to a trusted provider. Be careful not to place blame or use extreme language.

If you or someone you know is in danger of harming themselves, call a local crisis line or the National Suicide Prevention Line at 1-800-273-TALK (8255).

Join a community support group to find people who understand and empathize with your struggles.

Mental Health And Your Liver

The American Liver Foundation has a helpline to find information and local resources at 1-800-465-4837.

The American Liver Foundation is partnered with Inspire.com to create an online global support community. Visit <https://www.liverfoundation.org/for-patients/resources/> for more information.

+ Doctor's Tip

If you have underlying liver disease, let your doctor know if you or your family notice changes in your mood, behavior, memory, or level of alertness.
